School Supply Drive was Victorious!

The Anson County Chamber of Commerce's "School Supplies Drive" has resulted in each county school receiving much-needed items for students.

Lisa Davis, Schools Board of Education chair; Lynn Edwards, Chamber executive director; and Dr. Greg Finn, Schools superintendent.

The Preston Burns Conference Room

at the Chamber has become a distribution site – with tables usually for meeting attendees stacked with notebook paper, pencils, crayons, rulers, glue and composition notebooks.

"We started the drive with $1,000 being approved by the Chamber's board of directors and collected $775 in monetary donations from organizations, businesses and individuals," said Lynn Edwards, the Chamber's executive director. "We also have had numerous supplies donated." So far, the Chamber has spent $654.32 on school supplies. "We will spend the remaining balance – $1,120.68 – for supplies and other needed items, such as gloves and coats, as the school year continues," Edwards said.

"The drive has been a huge success and we are very proud of the community for coming together to support the children who represent our future," she said, concluding, "I want to thank everyone who participated."

Edwards said it is not too late to make a monetary donation or to drop off additional schoolroom supplies. "We will continue to take donations for a while longer," she said.

I wish you the best in your new business opportunities on behalf of the chamber of commerce." Wadesboro Mayor Bill Thacker said, "I am glad to have Dr. Samuel-Cash open a new business here and I wish Supreme Dental all the best on behalf of the Town of Wadesboro."

Dr. Samuel-Cash said, "I want to thank God for my journey and story for Family owned business, started in a basement...

After 14 years as a national account sales manager at Revlon Consumer Products Corp., Scott Vuncannon decided the job's constant travel was keeping him away from his family and it was time for a change.

He found his new career in 1995, after running into an old high school friend while attending a trade convention in Myrtle Beach, S.C. That contact led him to a tour of Automatic Vending Services Inc., an Asheboro vending-machine operation founded by the friend's father.

Vuncannon quickly recognized the need for such services in Charlotte, which was experiencing unprecedented growth at the time. He and his wife, Nan, soon launched Piedmont Services Inc., working from their basement and operating only three vending machines.

From that modest start, the company — now called Refreshment Services Inc. — has grown to a 4,000-machine operation in eight counties. Last year, the company's revenue totaled $3.2 million, and the Vuncannons expect that to more than double this year to $6.5 million.

Much of that increase is coming through acquisition. In January, the Vuncannons bought Charlotte-based Refreshment Services and took its name. Four months later, they acquired the Charlotte and Greensboro branches of Serex Consolidated.

The company — whose clients range from WCNC-TV in Charlotte to Textron Fastening Systems' rivet production plant in Stanfield — is preparing to double the size of its 10,000-square-foot warehouse in Indian Trail by year end.

Because Refreshment Services is expanding so rapidly, managing growth has become the Vuncannons' biggest challenge. To ease that burden, the couple has embraced technology. For example, the company uses a Global Positioning System to track its delivery trucks, gauging the time spent at each location and checking each truck's speed and route. Meanwhile, the company uses a data port to track operations and monitor which products are most popular.

The business owners say communication has also proved crucial to managing the company's growth. "It is all about ... talking with the customers to find out what they want," Nan says. "Communication is key," Scott says. "It boils down to a relationship with the clients and employees."

Marion Kinley, human resources manager at Textron Fastening Systems, has been a client since 1995. "We stick with them because they are quick to react. They provide the service we want, (we) like the friendliness of the service guys and they listen to what our employees want."
